ABSTRACT

The present study was conducted to assess the effect of three agricultural land-uses viz. cropland, horticultural land and uncultivated land on soil quality and fertility status. Soil samples were collected from south-western plains of Punjab which is classified under semi-arid climate. Samples were analysed for assessment of some selected soil physico-chemical properties as well as macro and micro nutrient status. Results of the investigation reported that soil samples of the study area are slightly alkaline and non-saline in nature. Textural class observed as sandy loam in cropland and horticultural land while it was loamy sand under uncultivated land. Highest water stable aggregate (WSA) percentage was recorded under horticultural land and least was in case of uncultivated land at both 0-15 and 15-30 cm depths. Depth-wise increase in soil aggregation was also noted. Horticulture had highest soil organic carbon (SOC) concentration both in surface (8.91 g kg soil⁻¹) and sub-surface soil (5.75 g kg soil⁻¹). Available nitrogen (N) content followed a trend horticulture > cropland > uncultivated land but a different trend of cropland > horticultural land > uncultivated land was found in case of phosphorus (P) and potassium (K) availability in surface soil. In both soil depths cropland and horticultural land were found statistically at par with respect to available N, P and K contents. Highest available micro-nutrients were recorded under horticulture which was measured lowest in case of uncultivated land. All the macro and micro nutrients exhibited significant positive correlation among themselves. Negative correlation between SOC and BD ($r = -0.096$) was observed while WSA was found highly correlated with SOC ($r = 0.681$, $p = 0.01$) and clay content ($r = 0.681$, $p = 0.01$). Micro-nutrients also exhibited significant positive correlations both with clay content and SOC.

Introduction

Due to continuous degradation of natural resources maintenance of sustainability of environment has become a serious concern in recent years. A system is considered sustainable when it improves or maintains the quality of lithosphere, hydrosphere and atmosphere. Soil is an important non-renewable natural resource which has to be kept productive and healthy as because a major part of agricultural productivity depends on it. The main objective of sustainable agriculture is to maintain or improve the productivity without hampering the soil quality. Soil quality may be defined as

Jump to navigation List of current Chief Ministers of India; Image Credits: GettyAfter the recent Assembly Elections 2018, the Indian National Congress (INC) on Saturday has announced that it has captured the power in three vital states of India--Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, and Chhattisgarh. With the rounds of discussions and top-level meetings, the Congress has appointed new Chief Ministers in these states after their major victory. Who is a Chief Minister in India? According to the Indian Constitution, a Chief Minister is the elected head of the council of ministers in a state. In simpler words, the one who controls, rules or handles the functions of a particular state. The candidate who becomes Chief Minister oversees the day-to-day functioning of the state government. A CM is assisted by the council of ministers, which consists of cabinet ministers and deputy ministers -- among others. With the help of media, the CM is responsible for communicating all policies and decisions to the people of the state. Difference between Chief Minister and Governor The Chief Minister is vested with the 'de facto' executive powers and Governor is the official 'head of the state'. The CM is appointed, and sworn in, by the Governor of the state. Here's a list of current Chief Ministers in India.1. Nara Chandrababu Naidu - Andhra Pradesh Andhra Pradesh's CM, Nara Chandrababu Naidu. Nara Chandrababu Naidu was born on April 20, 1950, Naravarpalli, near Tirupati, India. He is an Indian politician who was the Chief Minister of Andhra Pradesh from 1995 to 2004 before he was again appointed as CM in 2014.2.
